INTRODUCTION

The successful reception by the numismatic public of the author's work on "The Copper coins of Muhammadan States," and the encouragement afforded by the appreciative letters of grateful coin lovers have tempted him to take up his pen once more in the service of the study of Oriental copper coins. There is probably no other country in the world that can offer to the coin collector such a vast and interesting set of problems as India can. The enormous number of types used on the coins during the last three or four centuries (without going back further), complicated by the different alphabetic signs and languages, present an apparently endless series of puzzles, enhanced still further by the fact that the die is usually two or three times the size of the coin, so that several specimens may have to be compared to enable one to read the coin correctly. The object of this work is to help the collector to solve some of these fascinating problems, and also to assist him to arrange his cabinet of Indian coins in a methodical manner, easy of access and admitting of a clear understanding of its contents.

A handy work on the copper coins of India has long been wanted for this purpose; much has been done by various writers but what is lacking is a simple guide which will include the whole and present it clearly before the reader.

The plan of the work is on similar lines to the author's first effort and might indeed be considered a continuation of that work, he however felt that India was too important to be considered otherwise than by itself.

This plan is a geographical one and the idea, briefly, is to divide the peninsula as nearly as possible into its modern political divisions viz:—

- 1 Bengal. 4 Bombay.
- 2 United Provinces. 5 Rajputana & Central India.
- 3 The Panjab. 6 Madras.
7. South India with Ceylon.

In each section the mints are given in alphabetical order with the British portion first and those of the Native States immediately following.

The main feature of the work, as before, is to give a drawing of every coin mentioned and then accompany it with a description of the piece together with its transcription and transliteration.

The author (as before mentioned) has aimed at embodying and bringing together in one work from every source all that has been done on the subject. He has therefore included all the coins illustrated in the various books and papers by Oliver, Rodgers, Hart, Whitehead Nelson Wright, Dr Taylor, Thomas, &c &c. It is hardly necessary to say how greatly he feels his indebtedness to these publications. They have been supplemented by drawings made from coins in his own cabinet, and from those contained in the collections of Lord Grandley, Col Biddulph, Col Shepherd Messrs J. P. Blackett, D F Howorth (author of Colonial coins & tokens), R Petchiffe, and Howland Wood. (U.S.A).

All these gentlemen have placed their entire collections at the author's disposal with permission to make use of any or all as he thought fit, and the author now wishes these gentlemen to accept his grateful thanks for their ready and unobtruded help.

To Sir Richard & Temple and Sir Geo. A. Grierson he would also tender his hearty acknowledgements for kindness in translating the inscriptions on the Burmese and Janus coins respectively. In addition to the rich collections mentioned above, the author has been given ready access to the vast series contained in the cabinets of the British Museum by the Keeper of the Coins - Mr G. F. Hill, whose help and sympathy with the object of the book has greatly sustained the author in his labours.

He would also like especially to record his gratitude to Mr. J. Allan, (also of the Department of Coins in the British Museum), for his unfailing courtesy and readiness to place his knowledge of the subject at the author's disposal.

To Dr. O. Boddington, Librarian to the Royal Asiatic Society and the Royal Numismatic Society, the warmest thanks, for his unremitting and friendly aid in criticising and correcting the Arabic and Nagari inscriptions on the coins, throughout the entire work.

Wm. H. Valentine.

HISTORY of INDIA.

Though it is not necessary in a work on Indian copper coins to go into minute details concerning the history of the country, it is yet very important to have a definite knowledge of the main events and many changes that have taken place during its existence.

GREEK INVASION. The earliest fact known regarding India, is, that Darius the Persian extended his boundaries as far as the river Indus, and that the Punjab and Sindh were ruled by numerous native chiefs. This was about the year 500 B.C. In 327-324 B.C. Alexander the Great made his celebrated march across Egypt, Turkey, and Persia. Having arrived at India he crossed the river Indus and defeated Porus, who was king of the region round about the valley of the Punjab. Then as his troops were unwilling to proceed, Alexander reluctantly retired. In 323 Alexander died. His garrisons in India MAURYAN DYN. were destroyed and driven back by Chandragupta who subsequently founded the Mauryan dynasty of Magadha. This monarch who seems to have been the first supreme sovereign of Hindustan died in 297 B.C. and was succeeded first by his son, and then by his grandson. This was the famous Asoka whose empire extended from the Hindu Kush in the N to the Nerbada in the S., and from the boundaries of modern Persia N., to the confines of Burma on the east. Its capital was Palaliputra, the modern Patna. After Asoka's death in 232 B.C. his empire broke up and

ANDHRA.

Kalinga and Andhra were among the first to acquire their independence. Other nations gradually arose, until in the 2nd century A.D. India was divided between the Mauryan dynasty at Magadha, the Andhras in the Dekkan, the Cholas, Cheras, and Pandyan in the south, the Yavanas and Palavas in western India, the Sakas in Sind (who assumed the Persian title of 'Satraps' or 'Kshatrapas') the Sat dynasty of Saurashtra at Kathiavar and the Kushans in the north-west. Kanishka (the ruler of the Kushans or Yush-chi, a Mongol race), who acceded about 120 A.D. formed a mighty empire, his boundaries extending into China as far north as Kashgar and stretched from there to the Persian frontier. The capital of his dominions was at Purushapura.

ra, the modern Peshawar. In the beginning of the third century AD. the Kushan and Andhra dynasties became extinct.

and their empires were broken up into minor states. The middle of the 4th cent^y revealed two other mighty empires, that of the Guptas, and that of the Western Satraps. The satrap Rudrasena and the Gupta Samudragupta were contemporaries. The latter's dominion extended from the Hugli to the Jumna and Chambal and from the Himalayas to the Nerbada river. Kamarupa, the present Assam, and other smaller states were tributary to him, and the clans in northern Rajputana were under his protection. Towards the end of the century (4th) the whole of the territories belonging to the Satrap or Western Satraps in Sind, Kutch, Surashtra, and the Konkan, was overthrown by the Guptas, whose empire was thereby extended to the Indus valley, and the Arabian sea. The Gupta empire subsisted till the end of the 5th cent^y when it was destroyed by the White Huns or Ephthalites. These were a Mongol tribe, and a section of those which committed such terrible ravage in Europe under into importance in the middle of the 6th centy.

They seem to have been Rajputs, and made their capital at Valapi (the modern Badami After Harsha's death (648)

India became once more a medley of petty states, and except for the local incursion of the Arabs in Sind, was free from foreign invasion till the beginning of the 11th century.

GHAZNAVIDS.

In 992 Sabuktigin of Ghazna took possession of the country as far as the Indus and a permanent footing in India was gained by his successors in 1022 when Mahmud of Ghazna wrested

MAHMUD of

the kingdom of Lahore from Jaypal II

Mahmud also defeated the rajas of Bhatia

Multan and the united armies of the kings of Gwalior

Malwa Kalinjar, Kanauj, Delhi and Ajmer in a decisive battle at Patawar in 1008 and acquired the name of the 'idol-breaker' by plundering various sacred Hindu shrines.

CHALUKYAS.

In the Dekkan the ancient Chalukya dynasty had been destroyed in the middle of the eighth century, but about 973 this recovered much of its former territory and made Kalyani its capital. In the south the Cho-la prince Rajaraja the Great overthrew the Pallavas of Kanchi and conquered the kingdom of Vengi, thus putting an end to the independence of the Pallavas after an existence of 800 years Rajaraja also added Kalinga to his dominions, and in 1005 annexed Ceylon. He thus became Paramount-Lord of Southern India and made Tanjpur his capital. The ancient Pandyan kingdom was probably tributary to the Cholas. The Hoisala or Bellals seem at this time (1020) to have occupied Western

BELLALS

Mysur and Malabar and also to have supplanted the ancient Chera dynasty. The house of Ghazni, after flourishing for about 150 years was overthrown by the family of Ghor. In 1186 Muhammad bin Sam of Ghor having defeated Khusru Malik (the last of the house of Ghazni) decided to conquer Hindustan which was then held by various Rapput clans. Muhammad

MUHAMMAD BIN SAM. was at first defeated by Prithvi (their leader) at Thanesar in 1191 on a second meeting at the same place two years later, 1193 finally defeated Prithvi slew him and annexed his dominions. In the following year he conquered Jaichand of Kanuj also and took Benār.

MARWAR

as and Kanuj. Thereupon the greater part of the clan retreated from Kanuj and founded

Marwar. In 1195 Gwalior was taken and Kilt-al-din Al-

KUTO AL DIN

ber took Gwalior (Anhalwara) the capital, but could not obtain possession of the country. In 1196 Kalingar was captured and Bihar and Bengal (capital Baur) reduced about the same time. After the death of Muḥbin Sam in 1205, Kilt al din became independent ruler of India, and the first of the Slave Kings of Delhi. At about the same period the Bellals had become very powerful in the south, having in 1190 annexed the territory of the Chalukyas and put an end to that dynasty taking the southern portion, whilst the Yadavas seized the north. The Shola kingdom was losing much of its former splendour, and the Pandyan were recovering their independence. Telengana was ruled by the Nanipati dynasty with their capital at Warangal

BELLALS

CHOLAS

PANDYANS

ALA AL DIN

The vigorous and talented Ala al din, nephew of Jalal al din, the first Khilji ruler (1290-1295)

invaded the Dekkan in 1294, and forced Ramachandra the Yadava raja to cede Ellichpur. In 1297-1298 he subjugated Gujarat, Somnath and Sorath, but. Kutch and N.W. Kathiawar preserved their independence. His general Malik Kafur again invaded the Dekkan in 1309, reduced Warangal and Berghat, and in 1310 invaded the Bellari kingdom and reduced the whole of the eastern territory. In 1318 Khusru ru Khan, general of Mubarak, the last Khilji, conquered Malabar, and in a revolt of the Yadavas which was suppressed by Khusru Khan, their leader Harapala was flayed alive. The power of the Muhammadans was now felt throughout India. Kashmir in the north, Orissa in the east, Kutch and Junagarh, and perhaps the extreme south of the peninsula alone retained their independence. Great as the Pathan power was, that greatness was the ultimate cause of its downfall and two causes mainly brought about this event; the invasions of the Mughals, and the want of cohesion among its numerous and restless provinces. In 1340 Bengal and Telugu gana became independent. Dissatisfied Mughal nobles found ed the Bahmani kingdom in the Deccan under Hasan Gangu, and south of the Krishna the princes of Vijayanagar reigned supreme. Jaunpur and Gujarat became independent in 1394 and also the kingdoms of Khandesh and Malwa, whilst many other parts of the empire were either in revolt or had resumed their independence. About 1344 various Hindu kings and princes of the south formed a league to stem the tide of Muhammadan invasion and submitted to the sway of the raja of Anagundi, a small state which in less than a century grew into the mighty empire of Vijayanagar, with its capital bearing the same name. Hind was ruled by the Jam family of Sumera rajputs. The western part of Kathiawar and Kutch were still independent under Hindu chiefs. In Orissa also was an independent Hindu dynasty in power.

MUBARAK I

BAHMANI.

TAIMUR

Whilst India was thus divided, the cruel and witty Taimur or Tamerlane with his Mughal hordes burst into its borders, slaughtering the inhabitants of every town he passed. Mahmud Shah II the Emperor (1394-1412) fled to Gujarat. Delhi surrendered and Taimur was proclaimed Emperor of India (1399). Having plundered and slaughtered the people of Delhi he shortly after left India by the route he had entered it, leaving anarchy, famine and pestilence behind. After this monster's departure, there was for a time neither Emperor nor Empire of Delhi. The Sultans 1414-1450 had little authority outside Delhi, and the last of the line surrendered his claims to Bahlol Lodi (1450-1488) who had occupied the whole of the Panjab. That ruler added

BAHLOL LODI.

Jamnagar to his dominions in 1478. Sikandar, his successor, reconquered Bihar and extended his territories in the direction of Bandelkund, but his dominions were rather a "congeries of nearly independent principalities, jaghirs etc" than a compact monarchy. Sikandar's son Ibrahim (1517-1526) disgusted his followers by his pride and cruelty. Thus matters stood when Babur invaded India.

SANGA

The Rajput provinces had recovered their independence, and acknowledged Sanga the raja of Mewar as their leader. Malwa, though still independent, was in 1526 annexed to Gujarat, whose kings also had subdued western Kathiawar, including Junagarh and Kutch, and under Ahmad Shah (1411-1443) built the new capital of Ahmadabad. Malwa Nasir of

GUJARAT

KHANDESH

Khandesh captured Aurangabad in 1599 and built the forts of Jainabad and Durtanpur. Sind was in the possession of Shah Rukn al-Din of Multan. In Gondwana

GONDWANA.

Sanyaram Sa of Mandla had extended his kingdom over 52 districts comprising modern Bhopal, Sagar and Damoh on the Vindhyan plateau, Rohtangabad, Narsingh, and Jabalpur in the Narmada valley. Mandla and Seoni in the Satpura highlands. The rest of the country was governed by other independent chiefs such as those of Chakragarh, Ratanpur and Chanda.

BAHMANI.

During the period 1397-1477 the Bahmani Kingdom had attained great power, and Ahmad Shah built Ahmadabad-Bidar on the site of an ancient Hindu capital. The Konkan was reduced and Goa taken from Vijayanagar (1469-1472). In 1477 Telingana was taken. At the end of the 15th century Bahmani shared the fate of so many Indian kingdoms and was broken up into 5 smaller sultanates: viz. The Barid shahs at Ahmadabad-Bidar, who were the real rulers though nominally acting as ministers of the last representatives of the Bahmani dynasty. The Imad Shahi dynasty with its capital at Jawilgarh, was independent from 1484-1574, when it ^{was} annexed to Ahmadnagar state.

ADIL SHAHS.

Bijapur was ruled by the Adil Shahi dynasty from 1489-1686, when it was incorporated into the Mughal empire by Aurungzeb. The Nizam Shahi dynas ty held sway over Ahmadnagar from 1489 - 1637, when its last representative was sent as a state prisoner to Gwalior. Golkonda was under the Nulth

Shahi dynasty from 1512-1687 when it was annexed by Aurungzeb. While the Muhamma dan kingdoms of the Dekkan were thus divided, all southern India was under the sway of the King of Vijayanagar Krishna Deva 1509-1580. The chiefs of Srirangapatam, Kelicel and others were his vassals. In 1524, Chham Raj Bole repaired name Maheshwari, now called Mysore.

In the year 1504 Prince Bābar a descendant of Tameri and Jirjis Khan acquired the kingdom of Kabul and in 1522 added Kandahar to his possessions. Encouraged by Langa, the raja of Ghilji, Bābar invaded India, and defeated and killed Ibrahim Lodi in the first battle of Paniput (1526), occupied Delhi and took Agra. The raja of Ghilji at first offered him assistance, but finding that Bābar intended to establish an empire of his

Before his death in 1530, Babar brought the whole of Hindustan under his power. Humayun his son and successor, was HUMAYUN.

The accident which led to Sher Shah's early death in 1545 before the fortress of Kalinjar was a great loss to India. His successor Islam Shah died in 1552 and dissension between the rival claimants paved the way for Humayun's return which took place in 1555. With the help of Persian troops Humayun defeated Sikandar Shah at the battle of Sirhind and gave India once more to the Mughals. He was succeeded by his son, the famous Akbar and in 1556 the second battle of Panipat was fought, the Afghan power for ever broken and Mughal supremacy firmly established. mighty Hindu supremacy of the south, and fought a decisive battle at Talikota in 1565 which caused the utter destruction of Vijayanagar.

The death of Akbar, one of India's greatest and wisest rulers, occurred on the 15th October, 1605 after a successful and glorious SHAH JAHAN.

reign of fifty one years. His son and successor Jahangir was succeeded in his turn by Shah

Jahan in 1627. He continued the extension of the Mughal empire by annexing the last remnant of the Ahmadnagar kingdom in 1637. Aurungzeb conquered Bijapur in 1686, Golkonda in 1687, and all the territory south of the Krishna which had been dependant on these kingdoms.

AURUNGZEB

But Aurungzeb was unable to quell the disorders which prevailed in his vast realm. The Rajputs and Jats were in open hostility. The Marhattas were plundering and burning Malwa, Gujarat, and the Dekkan, which by incessant warfare had been reduced almost to a desert. The Mughal armies took fort after fort from the Marhattas, but the latter were constantly relaxing them, and when hard pressed retired to their mountain fastnesses.

MAHRATTAS

Thus the overthrow of Bijapur and Golkonda, which had so long kept the Marhattas down, proved fatal to the Mughal Empire, and during the following century enabled the Marhatta kingdom to rise on its ruins.

EUROPEANS.

This will be a convenient place to consider the advent of the European element into Indian affairs, and which subsequently produced such remarkable results. The Portuguese were first upon the scene, from the landing of Vasco da Gama in 1498 near Calicut to the appearance of the Dutch and English they had a monopoly of trade between Europe and India. They took Goa in 1510, Diu in 1534, Boman between 1538-1545, and finally Salsette and Bombay.

PORTUGUESE.

DUTCH.

The chief settlements of the Dutch founded in the 17th century were Negapatam, Sadras, Palak. Simlipalam, and Cochin.

ENGLISH

Although the English East India Company (founded 1600) had established factories at Surat (1611), Calicut, Masulipalam and other places, they built their first fort (St. George) at Madras, only in 1639. Bombay given to Charles II as marriage portion of Katherine of Braganza, was finally handed over to the English in 1668.

BOMBAY

Fort St. David, Madras was purchased in 1691 and the villages of Chettanatti, Calcutta and Gobindpur in 1696.

FRENCH

The French possessed Masulipalam in 1669 Pondicherry 1674 and also Chandanagar.

DANES

At about the same time the Danes acquired Tranquebar and Serampur.

We now come to the rise of the Mahrattas. Sivaji the impetuous red soldier of fortune, was of the Bhonsla family, was born in 1627 and brought up in Poona.

He fought for and against Aurungzeb at various times and in 1662 held sway on the Konkan, which position he kept improving and strengthening till his death in 1680. The depredations of the Marattas multiplied and extended in every direction but their confederation occurred under Balaji Vishwanath who was made Peshwa or prime minister by Shivaji's grandson in 1712.

DEKKAN.

Nizam al mulk though originally Viceroy of the Dekkan and Carnatic provinces had since 1723 become practically independent. He claimed sovereignty over the states south of the rivers Tungabhadra and Krishna, while the Marattas at the same time demanded tribute from them. The growth of Mysore commenced from the time of the downfall of Vijayanagar, and under the reign of Chikka Deo Ray 1672-1704 assumed considerable dimensions. Of his acquisitions no fewer than 48 are enumerated among which Bangalore is the most important, but its possession was disputed by the chief of Sira. The Nawab of Arcot claimed territory reaching from the Gundakamma river to Cape Comorin whilst the Raja of Bednur asserted his right to a considerable portion of the Kanara coast, and south of this were the Rayas of Goorg, Tanjaur, Cochen, and the chiefs of Malabar, all independent.

MYSORE

MAHRATTAS

By 1734 the Mahratta power was fully established in Malwa and in 1736 they blockaded Delhi and forced the Nizam to grant them the whole of Malwa and the territory between the Nerbuda and the Ghambal.

NADIR SHAH

In 1738 Nadir Shah of Persia invaded India and marched to Delhi. Though at first courtesies were exchanged between him and Muhammad Shah two days afterwards, through a false report, the inhabitants were massacred and the city plundered. It has been estimated that booty to the value of 30 millions sterling were carried off by his followers. Nadir Shah was assassinated in 1747. An Afghan chief, Ahmad Shah Durrani, who had been his treasurer, made off with his master's money, and became ruler of Afghanistan, Baluch, Sind, and Kashmir. He invaded India in 1748 but was defeated by Prince Ahmad Shah, the heir apparent at the battle of Peshawar. This battle was the last great effort of the Mughal Empire, which was now tottering to its fall and on the death of the Emperor (one month later) and the repeated attacks of the Afghans crumbled in pieces. In the resulting confusion Ahmad Shah Durrani exacted the cession of the Panjab.

AHMAD SHAH DURRANI

NIZAM AL MULK.

Nizam al Mulk (or Asaf Jah), whose independence south of the Nerbuda River had been recognized by the Emperor Muhammad Shah, died in 1748

FRENCH

His death gave the French an opportunity of interfering in Indian affairs. Dupleix the governor of Pondicherry, managed so skilfully that, in 1751, he was acknowledged governor of all the country from the Kistna to Cape Comorin. The nawab of Arcot was under his authority, and Bussy, with a French army, represented French interests at the Nizam's court at Aurungabad. Thus French influence was supreme in the South

ENGLISH.

At this time the English power was of but little account, being confined to the towns of Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, Fort St. David & Serikota in the Tanjore dist.

MAHRATTAS.

The Mahrattas under the vigorous administration of the Peshwas, extended their authority over the Konkan and the western part of the Deccan. Berar, Gondwana, and Kutch including Salasur were under the Mahratta chief, Ragooji Bhonsle who in 1751 occupied territory as far south as the Godavari. In Hindustan the Peshwas territory was bounded by the Sone and the Ganges, while the Bhambal formed the northwestern boundary. The Marathas had also obtained by imperial grant, or assumed, the right to collect chauth (i.e. the fourth part of the revenue) in Gujarat, the Dekkan, and the south of India, the provinces of Lucknow, Patna, and Bengal, Allahabad, Agra, and Ajmer. Yet at this time the Marathas had no united government. Ram Raja at Salara was a merely nominal raja, the actual power having been usurped by Balaji Bai Rao (1740-1761) his Peshwa or Prime Minister who resided at Poona. The Peshwa's power in its turn being curbed by the powerful Maratha chiefs. Raghuji Shinde of Berar, Anand Rao Puar of Dhar, Darnaji Gaekwar, Mulhar Rao Holkar and Raniyi Pindia in Malwa. Thus we can at the most only speak of it as a "Maratha Confederacy".

MUGHALS.

In 1751 there remained under the Emperor Ahmad Shah's direct authority only the upper Doab or country between the upper courses of the Ganges and Jumna, the country between the Jumna and the Sutlej, and Gujarat, which was still under a dependent Mughal viceroy. The Rajputs were virtually independent under the leadership of the Rana of Udaipur and the rajas of Jodhpur and Jaipur.

ODH.

Oudh had become independent under Saadat

BENGAL

Khan in 1724 Bengal and Bihar under

BIHAR.

Aliverdi Khan in 1740,

ROHILKHAND.

Rohilkhand, the country east of the upper Ganges, was occupied by Ali Muhammad and his Afghans in 1744.

DURRANIS.

In 1761 the fourth battle of Panipat took place. This was between the Afghans under Ahmad Shah Durrani, and the Marhatta confederacy. Upwards of 100,000 men met in battle, the fight ending in the complete discomfiture of the Marhattas for the time being.

ENGLISH

A little later, or about 1764 the nation which was eventually able to crush the power of the Marhattas was rapidly gaining dominion in India.

The growth of British influence began to make itself felt.

The three presidency towns Madras, Bombay and Calcutta had become growing centres of influence. The French had been defeated by them, and their possessions (such as the northern Circars) annexed.

MYSORE.

In the south, Haider Ali had usurped the government of Mysore (1760) which may be said to have attained by 1780 its largest dimensions

BRITISH

The district of Bhengalpat was ceded to the British by the Nawab of the Carnatic in 1765. In the same year Bengal, Bihar and Orissa were granted to them by Shah Alam II, and in 1775 the district of Benares, including Bhumar and Ghazipur, were handed over by Tipu Sultan of Mysore. In 1769 the Marhattas again crossed the Gharnabal, in 1770 making themselves masters of Delhi and in 1771 placed Shah Alam II on the throne. War broke out between Ha-dar Ali of Mysore and the British in 1766 which concluded disastrously for the latter in 1769, as did also the second one in 1784 under Tipu Sultan.

SHAH ALAM II

HAIDAR ALI

TIPU SAHIB

In the third Mysore war, 1790-1792 the British were gloriously successful and at the conclusion of the fourth Mysore war in 1798-9 the power of Tipu was crushed and the districts of Kanara, Coimbatore and the Wynnad annexed. This conquest undoubtedly rendered Britain supreme in the Deccan. In 1800 the Nizam ceded the districts of Bellary and Bidar to the British the same year Wellesley annexed Tanjore. In 1801 the Carnatic was taken from the late Nawab for treacherous correspondence with

Tipsi The same year the Nawab of Oudh was forced to cede the districts called 'the ceded districts of Oudh'

MAHRATTAS.

From 1802-1803 the second Marhatta War was fought; the British, the Peshwa, and the Nizam on one side, with Bhonsle of Nagpur and Sindia on the other. On the defeat of Bhonsle and Sindia, the province of Gwalack was given up to Britain.

SUPREMACY

The supremacy of Britain was recognized by the following states:- Ruch Bihar in 1772 Cochin 1791, Madharabad 1798, Mysore 1799 Baroda 1801 Rampur 1801, the Peshwa's dominions 1802 Nagpur 1803, Sindia's dominions in 1804, Travankur 1805, and by Bharatpur, Alwar and Sholapur from between 1802-1806.

KASHMIR

NIPAL

The arms of Sind had by this time acquired their independence as also had the Sikhs in the Panjab under Ranjit Singh. This state became independent of Afghan rule in 1805, but Kashmir was still under their power. The Ghurkas of Nepal were steadily extending their territory to the West. Under the administration of the Marquis of Hastings (1813-1823) a hard-fought campaign against the Ghorakhs (1814-1816) reduced Nepal to its present area.

MAHRATTAS.

The fourth Mahratta war broke out in 1817 and though it only lasted about 4 months the armies of Holkar, of the Peshwa, and of Nagpur were routed, the Pindaris destroyed; the whole of Central India brought fully under British authority; and the Mahratta empire finally extinguished. Holkar was forced to cede the territory between the Satpura and Bundi Hills, Peshwa's territories were annexed and also the principality of Sagar, the district of Ajmir was taken from Sindia. After a short campaign Aja Sahib of Nagpur was deposed. British supremacy was recognized in all the Rajput States (except Bikanir) in 1817, 1818, and 1823.

CENTRAL INDIAN STATES.

Bhopal 1817. Indur, Dewas and Jaora 1818. Dhar 1819. In Bundelkhand, Orchha or Jeheri 1812. Rewa 1813. Samprithar 1817.

BOMBAY.

Kolhapur 1812, Sawantwadi 1819, Kutch 1816 or 1814 and Kathiawar 1820.

Under Lord Amherst (1823-1828) the Burmese government ceded Arakan and Tenasserim, and gave up its claims to Assam, Kachin and Jaintia.

Goorg was annexed in 1834 and Sind, after the campaign there in 1843. British supremacy was again

BRITISH SUPREMACY

accepted by the following -- Bikanir in 18-28, Bahawalpur 1838, Jathural 1835, Kaththalq in 1809, Mandi and Suket 1846, Chamba 1847, and Kashmir 1846. Kechar lapsed to the sovereign power in 1832, as also did Assam in 1839.

SIKHS.

In 1845 the Sikhs made an unprovoked attack on the British. Hardfought battles took place at Mirdkē, but at last the victorious British troops entered Lahore, the capital of the Sikhs, and peace was concluded in 1846. A further outbreak took place in 1849, when the domination of the Sikhs was finally broken and the Panjab annexed to Britain. Salara lapsed to the Paramount Power in 1852 through the raja leaving no natural heir, and Pegu was annexed after the 2nd Burmese war, the same year. Nagpur lapsed in 1853 Berar was assigned as payment for the maintenance of the subsidiary force in 1853, and Jhansi lapsed in 1854. Oudh was annexed in 1856 in consequence of Wajid Ali's ill government.

INDIAN MUTINY

In 1857 the Indian Mutiny broke out through conspiracy between some of the dispossessed chiefs, such as the ex-king of Oudh and those of Nagpur and Salara. Terrible scenes were enacted throughout Bengal, the United Provinces, the Panjat and Central India. The relief of Kanpur and Lucknow and the siege of Delhi must for ever be remembered by the British nation for the heroism displayed by her sons and the noble assistance given by the Feudatory Sikh and other chiefs.

On the 2nd August 1858 British India was placed by act of Parliament under the direct authority of the British Crown. Queen Victoria, of Gt. Britain and Ireland was proclaimed "Empress of India" at a magnificent Durbar held at Delhi on the 1st Jan. 1877.

This sketch of Indian history has been abridged from "The Historical Atlas of India by Ghas Joppert" principally, but with other material from Meadows Taylor, Pope (G.M.) Vincent Smith &c

POETICAL LEGENDS or COUPLETS.

The Mughal and some other rulers have caused the legends on their coins to be expressed in poetry. The following are in frequent use on the copper coins.

ERAS.

Want of space has prevented the author giving the equivalent in the Christian era with each date on the coins in the pages describing them; the comparative tables here given will however readily enable the reader to find the equivalent date when necessary. The most important of the many eras in use in India are the Hijra and the Samvat.

HIJRA ERA. This method of dating is used by Muhammadans everywhere and commences with the flight of Muhammad to Medina in 622 AD. The chief difficulty with this era however is that as the year contains only 12 lunar months, the years do not correspond to those of the Christian era. Hence the necessity for a comparative table of the two eras. A handy way to convert a Hijra date to its Christian equivalent, is to deduct 3 per cent from the Hijra date and add 622.

All the other dates are simple and are obtained by adding or deducting a certain number of years to arrive at the date of the coin in the Christian era.

From dates in the SAMVAT (or Vikramaditya) era subtract 57.

To dates in the SAKA (or Salivahana) era add 78

To dates in the BURMESE vulgar epoch add 638

To dates in the NEWAR era of Nepal add 569

ILAHİ The Emperor Akbar established an era of his own and called it the Tarikh ilahi or Divine years. It commenced in 963 AH = 1556 AD which was the first year of his reign. His immediate successors Jahangir and Shah Jahan also used it, mostly in conjunction with the Hijra date.

Tipu Sultan of Mysore also founded an era.

NOTES ON THE COINS

The earliest coins shown and described in this work are those of Muhammad bin Sam, the first of the Pathan kings of Delhi (see part two). They were called Delhiwala, and are a continuation of the type used in the Muhammadan conqueror's own province of Ghazna, are composed of billon, (i.e. copper with a small proportion of silver) and have an average weight of 56 grains. There are also some of pure copper which seem to have been issued in conjunction with the billon. Their weights vary from 10 to 70 grains, and it is possible they formed fractional parts of the Delhiwala. The issue of these pieces, together with a heavier billon coin of about 70 to 80 grains, and another of about 140 grains, continued down to the time of Muhammad bin Tughlak. This monarch in 730 A.H. issued a series of brass tokens and endeavoured to force the population to accept and use them at a much greater value than the metal contained in them. They consisted of one Kani (chital), two Kani, eight Kani, 16 Kani or $\frac{1}{2}$ tanka, 32 Kani ($\frac{1}{4}$ tanka), 50 Kani (the adli) and the tanka of 64 Kani. This currency was a failure however on account of the ease with which they could be counterfeited, and therefore Muhammad bin Tughlak caused them to be withdrawn after a trial of two years, and returned again to the old system. This seems to have been continued uninterruptedly throughout the reigns of the remainder of the Pathan Kings, supplemented however by a much heavier copper coin of 160 grains which was apparently introduced by Alauddin in 791. The currency of Sher Shah (946-952 A.H.) was on an entirely new standard, for he founded the system which, with little alteration, prevails throughout India at the present time. His coinage was an immense advance upon that of his predecessors and consisted of large coins in bold type, which were struck in nearly all the prominent cities of his empire where mints were set up for the purpose. The billon currency was abolished and a new type of coin adopted entirely of copper called the Dam, with its half, quarter, eighth and sixteenth, the dam itself weighing about 320 grains.

A new silver coin with a weight of about 175 grains and worth forty dams was also brought into existence by Sher Shah. This coin was called the rupee and sprang at once into popularity. On the accession of Akbar, the system of local mints greatly developed, and the large number of 75 different places have been recorded as mints of that emperor (The mint towns of the Mughal Emperors by R. B. Whithead in Jour. As. Soc. Bengal 1912) and this number was still further augmented during the growth of the Mughal empire. On the decay of the empire most of these mints were continued by the new possessors many of these rulers not only using the mints but also adopting the same types and legends. While these changes were taking place, the use of the rupee was fully recognized by the new powers and on the growth of British rule its superiority was made permanent. In 1829 by an Order in Council the rupee was authorized to be valued at one shilling and fourpence sterling and 15 of them to be accepted for one pound sterling. The rupee (silver) equals in value 16 annas nickel, or 64 paise or 192 pie copper.

NOTES for READERS

The catalogue number is always above the coin.

The figures below the coin give the weight in grains.

It will be noticed that the transliteration of the Arabic legends on the coins are given exactly as they read in that language, but in the pronunciation "Arabic nouns have frequently the definite article al, 'the' of the language prefixed to them. If the noun happens to begin with any of the 13 letters te, se, dal, zal, re, ze, sin, shin, sad, jad, toe, zoe, or nun, the l of the article assumes the sound of the initial letter of the noun; al din becomes ud din, al nur unur &c &c.

HISTORY of BENGAL.

The history of so large a province as Bengal forms an integral part of the general history of India. The northern part, Bihar, ranked as a powerful kingdom in ancient times, and its chief town, Patnā, is identified as the 'Palibothra' of the Greeks. The Delta or southern part of Bengal lay beyond the ancient Sanskrit polity and was governed by a number of local kings belonging to a pure Aryan stock.

Until the end of the 12th century, Hindu princes ruled over the lower valleys of the Ganges, in petty principalities. In 1199, Muhammad Bakhtiyar Khilji was appointed to lead the first Musalman invasion into Bengal. The Muhammadan conquest of Bihar dates from 1200 and the new power speedily spread southwards into the Delta. From about this date until 1336, Bengal was ruled by governors appointed by the Muhammadan Emperors in the north. From 1336 to 1539, its Musalman governors asserted a precarious independence, and arrogated the position of sovereigns on their own account. From 1539 to 1576 Bengal passed under the rule of the Suri dynasty of Sher Shah and his successors. On the overthrow of this house by the powerful arms of Akbar, Bengal was incorporated into the Mughal empire, and administered by governors appointed by the Delhi Emperor, until the treaties of 1765, which placed Bengal, Bihar, and Orissa under the administration of the East India Company. Down to 1854 Bengal was under the Governorship of the Governor General of India, but since that time its administration has been controlled by a Lieutenant Governor.

THE CURRENCY OF BENGAL.

Although Bengal is such a large province its issue of copper coins has been singularly limited. Whilst other parts of India have made use of an extensive currency in this metal, there have been but very few copper coins struck at the various Bengali mints. Of those figured in this work by far the larger number have been issued by the East India Company. Muhammad bin Tughlak issued copper from three mints, Sher Shah from one, and the Mughals from nine. Several writers have commented on this dearth of copper coins in Bengal, and a suggested explanation is the large use of the kauri (or cowrie) as currency. This small mollusc of which the following is a representation, actual size.

belongs to the Cypræidæ family and is found principally on the shores of the Maldivé Islands. Mr J. Allan of the British Museum recently made mention of this use of the kauri in a paper published in the Numismatic Chronicle 1912, and gave many facts concerning it. Whether the paucity of copper coins in Bengal was due to the popularity of the kauri or not, the fact remains that immense quantities of these shells have been imported into Bengal from remote times for use as currency. According to "Kelly's Cambist," the value of the Kauri as a circulating medium during the early part of the last century (1821) was 2560 to a rupee.

THE ANDAMAN ISLANDS.

These islands form a small group in the Bay of Bengal. An attempt by the British to colonize them in 1798 was abandoned on account of the climate. On the suppression of the Indian mutiny in 1858 they were occupied as a penal settlement.

HISTORY OF BURMA.

The Burmese claim descent from the Sakyas kings of Kapilavasta, from whom sprang Buddha Gautama, who is said to have been born in the 6th cent. B.C. The first tangible fact in their history however is the establishment of their capital at Ava, in 1364, continuing to be their seat of government for 369 years. In the middle of the 16th cent. the Portuguese first became acquainted with Burma, which at this time was at the zenith of its power, having conquered the Peguans and all but subjugated Siam. In 1752 the Peguans abolished Burmese supremacy, captured Ava, and carried the king off captive to Pegu. Meantime a patriot of obscure birth afterwards known as Alomg-Shya had arisen, he, in 1753 recaptured Ava, and subsequently drove the Peguans out of Burma, reconquered Pegu and carried his victorious followers across Siam to the walls of Bangkok.

Alompra (his European name) died in 1760, and was succeeded by his son, who in his turn was succeeded by his brother Hsin-phye sin, during whose reign an immense Chinese army, sent to annex the country, was defeated. This king was succeeded by his son in 1776, who reigned five years, and was succeeded by Moungh-Moungh, grandson of Alompra, a mere puppet in the hands of his uncle, who supplanted him, and ascended the throne in 1781, under the name of Mondara-gye. This prince in whom the active spirit of Alompra seemed to survive, annexed Arakan to the Burmese empire. He died after a reign of thirty-eight years, during which he removed the capital to Amarapura, and was succeeded by his grandson, Phya-gyee-dau, in 1819. It was during the reign of Mentara-gyee that war first broke out between the British and Burmese, which resulted in the cession of Arakan and Tenasserim to the East India Company. Phya-gyee-dau removed the capital back to historic Ava in 1822. He was dethroned in 1837, and was succeeded by his brother Tharawadi who was put under restraint in 1845, his eldest son, the Prince of Pagan being appointed regent. During his tyrannic regency, the second war between Britain and Burma took place, after which the British acquired the rich provinces of Pegu and Martaban. The tyrant was deposed and another son of Tharawadi, the Prince Mindon Min, was raised to throne in 1853, and reigned until his death in 1878. Early in his reign he removed his court to Mandalay. Sir A. P. Phayre made three attempts in 1855, 1862, 1866 to conclude a commercial treaty, but it was not until the following year, 1867, that Colonel Fyche, on the part of the British Government, was able to conclude a treaty with the Burmese king, whereby trade in Burma was thrown open to British subjects, and a commercial court established at Mandalay. This treaty remained a dead letter during the life of Mindon Min, and matters did not improve with the accession of Thibau in 1878. At the close of 1885 owing to Thibau's interference with British traders, influenced it is believed by French intrigues, Britain declared war. Thibau was taken prisoner, and Burma was formally proclaimed British territory, 1st January 1886.

HISTORY OF KÜCH BĪHAR

All the members of the ruling family bear the name of Nārāyan, the greatest of whom was Nar Nārāyan and who reigned about 1550 A.D. His son Lakshmi was defeated by the Mughals who carried him away prisoner to Delhi. In 1772 the Nasir Des was driven out of his country by his rivals, who were aided by the Bhutias. He applied to the British and with their assistance expelled the Bhutias, and forced them to sue for peace. From that time till 1863 little occurred to attract British attention when the death of the Raja leaving a son and heir only ten months old caused them to undertake the management of affairs. It was resolved to appoint a British commissioner to take this duty under his direct control during the prince's minority. The young Raja received his early training at Patna, was married in 1878 and attained his majority in 1883 at the same time assuming the administration of the state. He died in England at Bechell 1911. His son Rajendra who succeeded him also in 1913 died at Bechell a few days after the wedding of his brother to a daughter of the Gaekwad of Baroda. Rajendra was succeeded by Jitendra his brother.

HISTORY OF MANIPUR.

The kingdom of Manipur first emerges from obscurity as a neighbour and ally of the Shan kingdom of Pong, which had its capital at Moaung. The history of Manipur contains nothing of special interest until about the year 1714 A.D. In that year a Raga named Pāmheiba became Rājā of Manipur, and adopted Hinduism, taking the name of Gharib Nawāz. This ruler made several successful invasions into Burma, but no permanent conquest. After his death the Burmese invaded Manipur, and the ruler, Jai Singh, having sought the aid of the British, a treaty of alliance was negotiated in 1762. The force sent to assist Manipur was, however, recalled; and after this, little communication passed between the British Government and the state for some years. On the outbreak of the first Anglo-Burmese war in 1824, the Burmese invaded Cachar and Assam, as well as Manipur; and Gambhir Singh of Manipur asked for British aid, which was granted. The Burmese were expelled and the Koko valley, peopled by Shans was added to the state. In 1826, peace was concluded with Burma and Manipur was declared independent.

HISTORY OF NIPĀL.

The history of Nepal is referred back to a remote and legendary past. The present dynasty, which claims a Rajput descent; first established itself in 1769. For 200 years previous they had ruled in the town of Ghorra, but they then conquered the whole of Nepal. In 1791, they came into collision with the Chinese, but were compelled to submit to an ignominious peace. The first relations with the British, date from the same period. Aggressions in the direction of Garhwal led to the Gurkha wars 1814-15, in which the Nepalese fought bravely and were with difficulty defeated by the British. The peace of Segauli, ratified in 1816, still governs our relations with Nepal.

HISTORY OF SIKKIM.

Local traditions assert that the ancestors of the Rajas of Sikkim originally came from Lhasa in Tibet, and that about the middle of the 16th cent. three Lamas succeeded in converting the Lepchas of Sikkim to Buddhism and in making Phun-tso Namgyel Raja of the land. Sikkim came into close alliance with Britain by assisting them against the Gurkhas in 1816, and at the close of the war were rewarded with territory & the usual guarantee of protection.

SECTION II

UNITED PROVINCES OF
AGRA and OUDH,

AND ALSO THE NATIVE STATE OF GARHWAL

HISTORY OF THE UNITED PROVINCES

The early history of these provinces is that of Hindustan proper. In 1775 the south east portion was acquired by the British from the Nawab Vizier of Oudh. In 1801 a further tract was ceded by him, and in 1808 the conquests of Lord Lake extended the frontier as far as Delhi. The hill districts were taken from the Nepalese in 1815, and the south division of Ghansi has been acquired by lapse or forfeiture since 1840. In 1853 the independent presidency of Agra was formed, having previously been known as the "Ceded and Conquered Provinces." There have been two severe famines - in 1837-38 again in 1860-61. This tract formed the centre of the Sepoy Mutiny of 1857. The first outbreak was at Mirat, Kanpur and Ghansi were the scenes of the cruellest massacres, and the native population, chiefly in Rohilkhand sided generally with the rebels. But Allahabad was firmly held, as also was Agra, though closely besieged; and after the capture of Delhi, the British civil administration gradually reasserted itself throughout the country. As the result, the Central Provinces were formed into a separate government, partly out of the Southern districts, Delhi with the surrounding country was permanently attached to the Punjab, and Allahabad was substituted for Agra as the seat of government. In 1877 Oudh, which had been annexed by the British in 1856 and placed under a Chief Commissioner, was joined to the Lieutenant-Governorship of the North West Provinces, a title which has lately been merged into that of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh.

HISTORY OF AGRA, CITY AND PROVINCE.

The district of Agra has scarcely any history apart from that of the city. The Lodi kings of Delhi had a residence on the east bank of the Jumna which was occupied by Bābar after his victory over Ibrahim Khan in 1526. Bābar fought a great and decisive battle with the Rajputs near Fathpur Sikri in 1527. His son Humayun also resided at old Agra until his expulsion in 1540, Akbar lived in the province for the greater part of his reign, and founded the present city of Agra on the west bank. The town of Fathpur Sikri also owes its origin to him was built about 1570, and was for a short period the seat of the Mughal empire. The mausoleum of this great organizer is at Sikandra five miles away from Agra and was built by his son Jahāngir, who however deserted Agra towards the close of his reign. Shah Jahan was proclaimed Emperor at Agra in 1628 and resided there from 1632 to 1637. It was during this period that many of its celebrated mosques and other works were either built or completed and the city renamed. Its new title was Akbarabad, so named in honour of his grandfather and the coin struck at Agra bore this appellation from the time of Shah Jahan to that of Alam II. In 1637 Shah Jahan removed the seat of his empire to Delhi, but continued the construction of the buildings at Agra. The Taj Mahal, generally allowed to be the most exquisite piece of Muhammadan work in the world was built by this magnificent Emperor in commemoration of his wife, Mumtaz-i-Mahal. From the year 1666 Agra dwindled into the position of a provincial city, and was often attacked by the Jats. Its annals during the decline of the Mughals are uneventful; though in 1764 the city was taken by the Jats of Bharatpur under Suraj Mall and Samru the Swiss renegade. In 1770 the Mahrattas overran the whole Soab; but were expelled by the imperial forces under Nizam Khan four years later. After passing through the usual convulsions which marked the close of the 18th century Agra and district came into British hands by the victories of Lord Lake in 1803.

HISTORY OF OUDH.

The legendary annals of Oudh date back to the very earliest period of Indian history. The sacred city of Ayodhya from which the province derives its name lies close to the modern town of Faizabad and forms one of the holiest places of the Hindu religion. At the dawn of history, Oudh appears as a flourishing kingdom. In its capital, Sakya Muni the founder of Buddhism began his labours. The modern chronicles of Oudh begin with the great struggle which ended in the overthrow of Kanauj. The fall of that famous empire, ruled over by the last native Hindu dynasty, gave a final death-blow to the Buddhist faith, and re-established the supremacy of the Brahman creed throughout India. After his conquest of Kanauj, Muhammad Ghori, or his lieutenant overran Oudh in 1194. Muhammad Bakhtiyar Khilji was the first Mussalman to establish and organize an administration, and he chose Oudh as a base for his military operations. He refused allegiance to Alauddin and his son Ghias-ud-din established a hereditary governorship of Bengal. Ayodhya, however, was wrested from the Bengal dynasty, and remained an outlying province of Delhi. Thereupon a Hindu rebellion ensued, in which 120,000 Mussalmans are said to have been massacred. Prince Nasir-ud-din was sent to crush the rebellion; and in 1242, Kamal-ud-din is recorded as

Viceroy of Qudhya. Thenceforth the Province remained an integral portion of the Muhammadan Empire. Babar's invasion of Qudh has left little historical record and troubled times followed his death, but after the defeat of the Afghan dynasty, it settled down into one of the most important of Akbari vicerealties. Under the Mughal dynasty in its flourishing days, the native Hindu chieftains accepted their position without difficulty. The empire was too strong for them to dispute its sway, and they were too strong for the empire to attempt their suppression. A century or so later, the rise of the Marhattas broke down the decaying empire of Aurungzeb, and the chieftains of Qudh acquired an almost complete independence. About the year 1732, Saadat Ali Khan, received the appointment of Subahdar of Qudh, and founded the Muhammadan dynasty which ruled down to our own times. Before his death, Qudh had become practically an independent state. His grandson Shuja al-daula attempted to take advantage of the British and acquire the rich province of Bihar. He therefore advanced upon Patna, taking with him the fugitive Emperor, Shah Alam and the exiled Nawab of Bengal. The enterprise proved a failure, and Shuja al-daula retired to Bazar. In October 1764, Major Munro followed him to that post, and won a decisive victory, which laid the whole of Upper India at the feet of the British. The Nawab fled to Barili; while the unfortunate Emperor joined the British camp. In 1775, Shuja al-daula died and was succeeded by his son Asaf-al-daula who subsequently removed his capital from Faizabad to Lakhnau. Under this ruler, the Lakhnau court reached its highest splendour and the dominions of the Nawab of Qudh extended over a wider area than at any other earlier or later period. Saadat Ali Khan, who in 1798 succeeded his half brother Asaf-al-daula, threatened by Sindhia on the advance of Jamān Shāh to the Indus, concluded a new treaty with the British in 1801, by which he gave up half his territories in return for increased means of protection. Rohilkhand thus passed under British rule, and the Nawab became still more absolute within his restricted dominions. Sa'adat's son, Ghāzi-al-dīn Haider (1814) was the first to obtain the title of King. Nasir-al-dīn Haider (1827) Muhammad Ali Shāh 1837, and Amjad Ali Shāh (1842) followed in rapid succession and wasted away their lives in that alternation of sensuous luxury with ferocious excitement for which the court of Lucknow became proverbial. In 1847, Wajid Ali Shāh, the last King of Oudh ascended the throne. The condition of the Province had long attracted the attention of the British Government and had called upon the King for reforms; which, however, were never effected, and the only remaining remedy was deemed to be annexation. A treaty was prepared offering liberal terms to Wajid Ali, such as allowing him to retain his title and 15 lakhs a year for the support of his dignity; and three days were allowed him in which to consider and sign the treaty. He refused to sign it, and therefore, in February 1856, the British Government assumed to itself the government of Oudh, exclusively and for ever.

HISTORY OF JAUNPUR.

When Jaunpur first makes its appearance in authentic history it was subject to the rulers of Benares, and with the rest of their dominions fell into the hands of Muhammad bin Sam after his victory over the Hindu champion Jaichand, in 1194 A.D. From this time it appears to have formed part of the kingdom of Kanauj. In 1360, Firuz bin Tughlak encamped there for six months, and in 1388, Malik Sarwar Khwaja was sent by Muhammad bin Firuz to govern the eastern province, which extended from Kanauj to Bihar. Khwaja fixed his residence at Jaunpur and taking advantage of Timur's invasion, he made himself independent of the Delhi court and assumed the title of Sultan al-Shark, or Eastern Emperor. The Sharhi dynasty ruled at Jaunpur for nearly a century, struggling the whole time with their former masters for the supremacy of Hindustan. The last of the dynasty, Sultan Husen, was finally defeated by Bahlol Lodi in 1478. On the fall of Ibrahim Lodi at Panipat, the governor of Jaunpur, Bahadur Khan, asserted his independence, but Babar sent his son Humayun eastward for its recovery, and thenceforward it formed a portion of the Mughal empire until 1722. It was then transferred, with Benares, Ghazipur, and Chunar to the hands of the Nawab Wajir of Oudh. After the battle of Buxar the District fell to the British, and in 1775 was made over to them permanently.

HISTORY OF GARHWAL.

The early history of Garhwal is obscure, but it seems that about five centuries ago, the valley of the Alaknandā was divided into 52 petty chieftainships, each chief having his own independent fortress (garh), from which the country is said to have derived its name. A century later, Ajai Pal, ruler of Chāndpur, reduced all these small principalities under his own sway and became the founder of the Garhwāl kingdom. He placed his capital at Srīnagar, where the ruins of his palace still exist. The Rajas of his line, known as the Chānd dynasty, Kshatriyas of the lunar race, ruled over Garhwāl and the adjacent Tehri State until their expulsion by the Gurkhas in 1803. For 12 years the Gurkhas of Nepal ruled over Garhwāl and Dehra Dun with a rod of iron, and then commenced encroaching on British territory at Gopāthpur and the Tehri frontier. A war broke out in 1814 which resulted in the capture by the British of Almora, and in 1816, Numaon & Garhwāl. The Tehri principality known as "Independent Garhwāl" was restored to Sunder Sen Sah, under whose descendants it still remains, whilst the valley of the Alaknandā with Srīnagar, the old capital of the Chānds, was retained by the conquerors and erected into a British District on the usual model.

PART II

HISTORY OF THE PANJAB

The history of India in the earlier pages of this work briefly commemorates the chief facts in the history of the Panjab and therefore the main points only need be mentioned here. This history is representative of the different races who have conquered India and the plains between its rivers formed the battle ground for mastery of empire.

In 327 B.C. Alexander the Great advanced as far as the Sutley and the Greco-Bactrian dynasty founded by his general, Seleucus, which lasted till about 126 B.C. has left many remains Chandragupta of the Mauryan dynasty who ruled Magadha about this period (303 B.C.) added the Panjab to his dominions, and a little later it was a stronghold of the Buddhists its early as the 7th century Musalman invaders from the West began to devastate the district.

It was not till 975 however that Sabuktigin, general of Khurāsān, father of the great Mahmud, advanced beyond the Indus to plant the Muhammadan power firmly in the heart of the Panjab. In 1027 Mahmud of Ghazni made Lahore the capital of a subject province. From Lahore, the seat of empire was removed to Delhi by Muhammad Ghori founder of the second Muhammadan dynasty circ 1193. From this period onward the coins in this work form a chronological picture of the many changes of dynasty experienced and should prove of service to the student. In 1524 the Mughal prince Babar invaded India and succeeded in conquering the whole Panjab as far as shortland. Two years later he defeated the Afghan army at Panipat, entered Delhi as a conqueror and founded the Mughal dynasty. The gradual decline of the Mughals and the rise of the Sikhs into power commenced in the middle of the 17th century. The invasion of Nadir Shah in 1738 and that of Ahmad Shah Durrani in 1762 for a while checked the power of the Sikhs, but true to their faith the Sikhs rose once more as their conquerors withdrew and initiated a final struggle, which resulted in their complete independence. The overthrow of the Sikhs, the final collapse of the Mughals and the advent of the British as a paramount power are set out in further detail as beforementioned in the earlier pages of this work.

HISTORY OF BAHAWALPUR.

The ancestors of the ruling family of Bahawalpur originally came from Sind and assumed independence during the break up of the Durrani empire when Shah Shuja was expelled from Kabul (1809). The Nawab, Bahawal Khan II made several applications to the British for protection which were declined although the treaty of Lahore with Ranjit Singh really affected this object. The first treaty between Britain & Bahawalpur was in 1833, where the independence of the Nawab within his own boundaries was secured.

The political relations as at present existing between the state and the paramount power are regulated by the treaty of 1838.

HISTORY OF BALUCHISTAN

The earliest known facts regarding Baluchistan are that Alexander marched his troops across its deserts to invade India and that after his death it passed to his general Seleucus. Later on it was ruled by the Greco-Bactrian Kings reigning in Afghanistan and the Panjab. Between B.C. 140 and 180 they were overthrown by the Sakas. About this period Buddhism flourished. The empire of the Sassanians followed but Baluchistan was not conquered till the time of Nushirwan A.D. 529-577. In the year 635 or 6 Rai Chach marched from Sind and conquered Makran and the Rai dynasty extended their dominions towards Kandahar.

har. The Arabs reached Mekran as early as 643 and their power lasted till about the end of the 10th century. Shortly after, Baluchistan fell into the hands of Sabuktigin, and his son Mahmud of Ghazni was able to effect his conquests in Sind owing to his possession of Khuzdar. From the Ghaznavids it passed to the power of the Ghori sultans and later was included in the dominions of Muhammad Khan of Khwarizm (Khiva) 1219. About 1228 a Mongol expedition under Chagatai penetrated as far as Mekran. A few years later the south of Baluchistan came under the rule of Alamsk of Delhi but soon reverted to the Mongols. A century later the Baluchi extended their power to Kalat, Kachhi and the Panjab, and the wars between Shakar the Rind and Gwathram Lashari so celebrated in Baluch verse, took place. From 1556 to 1595 the country was under the Safavid dynasty of Persia, when it fell into the hands of the Mughals of Delhi until 1638 and then reverted to Persia. In 1590 the upper highlands were included by Akbar in the sarkar of Kandahar, while Kachhi was part of the Shakhar sarkar of the Multan Subah. Mekran alone remained independent under the Maliks, Buledais and Gichkis until Nasir Khan I of Kalat brought it within his power during the 18th century. The Mirwaris from whom the present Kalat rulers are descended claim Arab origin. One of their chiefs Mir Hasan regained the capital from its Mongol governor, and he and his successors held Kalat for twelve generations when in 1666-7 the rise of Mir Ahmad occurred. Fifth in descent from the latter was Abdullak an intrepid soldier of fortune who possessed himself of Kachhi - Gandava, hitherto held by different petty chiefs, under the authority of the Nawabs of Sind. In 1707 during Muhabbat, his successor's reign, the famous Nadir Shah advanced from Persia to invade Hindustan, and while at Kandahar successfully sent his forces to establish his authority in Baluchistan, Muhabbat Khan however was continued in the government of the country by Nadir's order. Muhabbat was in 1750 succeeded by Nasir Khan. He proved a wise, politic and warlike prince, took great pains to re-establish the internal government of all the provinces under his dominion, and improved and fortified the city of Kalat. Nasir Khan declared himself independent in 1753, but Ahmad Shah Durrani of Kabul (the first of that dynasty) sent a force and reduced him to obedience. Nasir died of extreme old age in 1793 and was succeeded by his eldest son Mahmud Khan. During the latter's reign the state gradually diminished, the process continuing through Mehrab, the next Khan's rule. In 1809 Kalat was attacked by the British in consequence of Mehrab's treachery. Mehrab was killed in the conflict, but later was proved innocent of the odious charge. The treaty now in force between Britain and Kalat was signed in 1876 at Jacobabad by Khudadad Khan and Lord Lytton.

HISTORY OF CHAMBA

Founded probably in the sixth century by Marut, a Surajvansi Rajput, who built Brahmapura the modern Brahmapur, Chamba was extended by Mera Varma (680) and the town of Chamba built by Sahil Varma about 920. The state maintained its independence, acknowledging at times a nominal submission to Kandahar, until the Mughal conquest of India. Under the Mughals it became tributary to the empire but its internal administration was not interfered with, and it escaped almost unscathed from Sikh aggression. The state first came under British influence in 1846. The part west of the Ravi was at first handed over to Kashmir, but subsequently the boundaries of the state were fixed as they now stand, and it was declared independent of Kashmir. In 1848 a sanad was given to the Raja assigning the territory to him and his male heirs. Raja Gopal Singh incurred the displeasure of Britain and required to abdicate in 1873, and was succeeded by Raja Pharn Singh who abdicated in favour of the present Raja, Bhuri Singh in 1904. HISTORY OF KASHMIR.

The state of Kashmir has been styled 'The Paradise of India', and tradition says that its fruitful valleys once formed the bed of a vast lake. Hindu Kings are said to have ruled there for centuries before the Christian era, and that from about 150 to 100 B.C. it was ruled by Tartar princes. Inscriptions on coins and monuments tell us that Hindus reigned there when Mahmud of Ghazni led his famous expeditions against India from 996 to 1024 making fearful havoc throughout the province. After Mahmud's departure the country again settled down to the peaceful rule of its Hindu Kings until 1305 when it was invaded from Tibet and its King Sena Deva fled. He was succeeded by Ranyipoo, son of Yafsan King of Tibet who is said to have been converted to Islam, and assumed the name of Sadar al-din. His successor Shams al-din who ascended the throne in 1341 is usually considered the first Muhammadan King of Kashmir. Foremost among the list of these Muhammadan rulers is the name of Zain al-abidin who reigned fifty two years, and was a poet, artist and sportsman. He encouraged architecture, literature and the arts, introduced weaving, paper and glass making, and the celebrated papier mache work. After his death the state fell into disorder and eventually the Chaks (a Hindu race) assumed power. In 1359 Ghazi Khan Chak declared himself sovereign but his dynasty only reigned twenty seven years when Kashmir was conquered by Akbar in 1586 and annexed to the Mughal empire. From that time until 1753 it remained a province of the empire and was the frequent retreat in the summer of the Emperors of Delhi. In 1738 Nadir Shah of Persia invaded India, sacked Behli and added the fair vale of Kashmir to his conquests. Ahmad Shah Durrani of Kabul followed in Nadir's wake and in 1752 subjugated and annexed the state to his empire. At different times governors were appointed to the province among whom were Nur al din and Muhammad Azim Khan, the latter making himself independent in 1811. It remained under Afghan sway until 1819 when it was conquered by the Sikhs. From that time it was ruled by a succession of governors appointed by the Maharajas of the Panjab until the dissolution of the Sikh realms and their conquest by the British in 1845. A year later Gulab Singh the ruler of Jammu was confirmed in possession of the territory which he had held as feudatory chief by payment of £750,000 and also given possession of Kashmir. His successor was his son Ranbir Singh who died in 1885 and succeeded by his son Pratap Singh the present ruler.

HISTORY of PATIALA

The ruling families of Patiala, Jhind and Nabha have one common ancestor in Phul a chaudhari. The rajas of Jhind and Nabha are descendants of his first son Tilora whilst the Maha raja of Patiala is descended from Rama the second son. All are Sikhs of the Sidhu Jat tribe. Ala Singh son of Rama defeated Saiyid Asad Ali in the battle of Barnala and over the Bhatis he was also victorious. He built the fortress of Patiala. In 1762 Ala Singh was defeated by Ahmad Shah Durrani but after his submission received into favour and given the title of Raja. On the Emperor's departure Ala put himself at the head of his Sikhs, boldly attacked the Afghan governor of Sirhind whom he killed, and compelled the population to remove to Patiala. On his death in 1765 his son Amar Singh succeeded largely increasing the power of the state during his reign. In the latter part of the 18th cent^y the famous adventurer George Thomas caused Patiala much trouble, but at last the Sikhs with the aid of Perron, the French general, were able to drive him off. In 1807-8 an appeal was made to Britain for protection against Ranjit Singh and in 1809 a treaty was made in which Ranjit Singh engaged to give up all claim to the Cs-Aulley states. Karam Singh who succeeded in 1813 assisted the English in their war with the Ghurkhas of Nepal. On the death of Karam in 1845 his son Narendra came to the throne and when war broke out with the Sikhs took his stand by the side of Britain as was also the case in the Mutiny of 1857. Mahendra who succeeded his father in 1862 proved an enlightened ruler and benefactor to his people, a proud distinction shared by his son Rajendra succeeding in 1876, and grandson Bhupendra the present Maharaja. of the two cities Karnal and Sirhind whose coins are illustrated nothing much is known to history. They are both within the borders of the state and that they were important places is evident from the fact that coins in large numbers were struck there, Karnal being especially prolific.

HISTORY of SIRMUR.

Sirmur, which means a crowned head, was the residence of the ancient Rajas who reigned before the present dynasty. The first of the reigning line was Agar Sen Rawal of the Jeyalmir family. He was in the neighbourhood on a pilgrimage to the Ganges in 1095, when the last of the ancient Rajas was accidentally drowned in a flood and Agar was placed on the vacant throne. His descendants reigned till 1803, when the Ghorhas of Nepal conquered Sirmur and retained possession until defeated by the English in 1815. They reinstated Karam Prakash the Rajput Raja to his dominions but deposed him later on account of imbecility and conferred the kingdom on his son Fath Prakash. He was succeeded by his son Raghubir who died in 1857. His immediate successor, his son Shamsher Prakash loyally assisted the British the same year in the Mutiny. The present ruler Amar Prakash came to the throne in 1911.
